Walt Disney

Walt Disney, a film producer and co-founder of the Walt Disney Company, was born in 1901 in Chicago. As a child Disney developed an interest in art and became the cartoonist for the school magazine. He used his talent in his first job in the film industry in Kansas. With his brother, Roy, Walt set up a film studio in Hollywood, which created famous cartoon characters, such as Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck. The Mickey Mouse cartoons with soundtracks made the reputation of Disney Productions.

In 1924 Walt Disney began his new project – a full-length animated film of ‘Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.’ Many expected it to be a commercial failure. But the production, using new techniques of filming, received wonderful reviews. It took nearly three years to film. The movie came out in 1937 after Disney had run out of money. But its strong critical reception made it the most successful film of 1938, earning $8 million on its first release. Then the studio produced several other successful animations, such as ‘Pinocchio’, ‘Peter Pan’, ‘Bambi’ and ‘The Wind in the Willows.’

During the Second World War there was much less demand for cartoon animation. In the late 1940s Disney finished production of ‘Cinderella’ and also ‘Peter Pan.’ In the 1950s Walt Disney Productions started producing popular action films. Several of them were really successful, like ‘Treasure Island’ (1950), ‘20,000 Leagues Under the Sea’ (1954) and ‘Pollyanna’ (1960). In 1964, they produced ‘Mary Poppins’ – their most successful film ever.

In the late 1940s Walt Disney began building up plans for an enormous theme park. He wanted it to be a magical world for children. Disney had a great love of trains since his childhood when he regularly saw trains pass near his home and that is why in his plans a train went around the park. After several years of planning and building, Disneyland opened on July 17, 1955. Its success encouraged Walt to consider another park in Orlando, Florida. In 1965, another theme park was planned.

Walt Disney had been a chain smoker all his life and he died of lung cancer on December 15, 1966. It was said that he had had his body frozen, but this is untrue. It seems that his employees spread this gossip, looking for one last joke at the expense of their boss. After his death, his brother Roy returned to lead The Disney Company, but the company missed the direction and genius of Walt Disney.
