MEMORABLE CHRISTMAS

I was eleven years old, at boarding school, and just before Christmas I caught measles. I concealed this from the teachers because any boy with measles was forced to stay in the school sanatorium – even if this meant spending a lonely Christmas there. But they found me out just a day before the end of term.

The Headmaster, Mr. Maurice, was a fierce man, feared by the boys for his beatings. I still remember him noticing the red spots on my face and shouting, ‘You silly little boy.’ I was sent off to the school ‘san’ and told that I would not go home for Christmas. I lay there that night, thinking of the fireside of my parents’ home and the presents round the tree, and weeping into my pillow.

Paxton Court School was a peculiarly joyless place, wrapped for much of the winter in a dense fog which crept up from the River Medway. Even on the coldest of nights the windows would stay open, the old, thin curtains blowing about in the gale-force winds. It was supposed to be good for our health. Our letters home were read by Mr. Maurice, while the only books we were permitted to read were ones selected by him. And I was to spend Christmas there.

There were three other boys in the ‘san’. We were not even allowed to watch television. Mr. Maurice forbade any programme in which the characters spoke with an American accent. Comics, which I loved, were also forbidden. From my window I watched my school friends go home. On the morning of Christmas Eve I was filled with great homesickness as I read and re-read the same page of ‘With Kitchener to Khartoum’, one of Mr. Maurice’s ‘good books’. Lunch – the potatoes had an awful, synthetic quality, I remember, and the meat was cold – passed in silence.

Then, in the early afternoon, the school nurse walked briskly up to my bed. ‘Get up, Fisk, and put your clothes on,’ she ordered. ‘Your father is taking you home.’

Even today I can remember my joy. I don’t remember saying goodbye to the other three unhappy boys I was leaving behind. I just ran down the stairs and into the Headmaster’s study where my father was waiting. We drove to our warm home on the hill above East Farleigh. There were cowboy films on our new television, a pile of comics for me to read, and the family doctor who insisted the more television I watched, the quicker I would recover.

At bedtime my mother pushed the couch from the sitting room into my father’s study, where I slept beside a log fire and woke up on Christmas morning to frost on the windows and music on the radio. It was the best Christmas Day ever: never afterwards have I felt such relief.

J. Henderson, S. Reid, Focus on FCE Practice Tests with Guidance, Nelson

Za każdą poprawną odpowiedź otrzymasz 1 punkt.

A

I study English for 6 hours per week in secondary school. For one hour each week we have conversation classes with a native speaker of English, where we talk about topics such as drugs, politics and culture. I know it's a really good opportunity to practise my spoken English, but I never make a contribution to the discussion. It's not that I don't have an opinion, or that I'm shy, but more that I don't have the vocabulary to express my views. I feel really frustrated at the end of the lesson. Nobody else in the group seems to have the same problem.

B

I'm a 24-year-old business student from Malaysia and I've been attending English classes at night school for the past 5 years. Up till now I've considered myself to be a good student. Last month I went to Britain to visit my relatives over there and it was awful. People found my pronunciation difficult to follow and I couldn't understand them either. What went wrong? My English teacher is very good and I always score the highest in grammar tests.

C

I'm writing to ask your opinion on a matter which is really annoying me. My English teacher never corrects my mistakes when I am speaking. Isn't that her job? How am I going to improve otherwise? Also she's always telling me that now I'm an advanced student and I should forget all the rules of grammar that I learnt when I was younger.

D

Can you help me? I really want to speak English the right way, with the correct accent. Do you have any good ideas? I have a particular problem with sounds like 's'. I plan to work in the UK in the future and nobody will take me seriously if my English pronunciation is anything short of excellent.

E

I am working as an au pair in London, looking after 2 small children. I love my job but the way that English people speak is a little puzzling. For example, I often hear them say things like 'more friendlier', whereas I thought it should be 'more friendly'. It also seems to be common for them to say 'we was' instead of 'we were'. Can you explain this? Would it be impolite of me to correct them?

F

I am an intermediate student of English (I have been studying it for 3 years). I'm quite good at reading and writing but listening is very difficult for me. My teacher suggested that I listen to the BBC World Service every day in order to improve my listening. The problem is that it's hard for me to understand every word. Do you have any ideas about how to make listening to the radio less difficult? I like listening to the news and knowing what's going on in the world.

G

I have studied English for 5 years at school but for the past 6 months I have been doing self-study using the Internet and books to improve. There are lots of materials to choose but I'm not sure what is best for me and how I should use them. I really would like to take the FCE examination but don't know how to study on my own. Should I take a course in my local school – which is a little expensive for me now – or is it possible to prepare for the exam doing self-study?

H

Could you please give me some advice on a problem I have at the moment with my English studies. I decided to go to the UK to improve my English but the college I am studying in at present is full of people from my own country. Although the teachers tell us we should only try to speak in English with each other, it is very difficult to do this, especially in our free time when we go out together. I am worried that my speaking will not improve.

THE DIPLOMAT

Some time ago there was an important meeting in London to discuss international trade and business between Europe and South East Asia. Over twenty countries sent diplomats to the conference. 3.1. Then the diplomats were often accompanied by their wives or husbands.

At one dinner the wife of a British diplomat was placed next to a gentleman from China. Lady Barnes had never seen or met anybody from China before. She felt a little uncomfortable and uneasy. 3.2. She was not sure if he spoke English so she just smiled. The Chinese gentleman smiled back and they both sat in silence.

Lady Barnes was glad when the soup arrived. 3.3. After a few minutes she turned to the Chinese gentleman and in a loud, slow and clear voice she said, 'Likee soupee.' The Chinese gentleman looked up at her, smiled and nodded his head. Lady Barnes did not try to begin another conversation and neither did the Chinese gentleman. 3.4.

Lady Barnes was very surprised when the Chinese gentleman stood up and began a long speech at the end of the meal. He thanked the British for the wonderful reception they had given the Chinese. 3.5. He spoke perfect English. He was clear, natural and fluent.

When the Chinese gentleman sat down, there was great applause from the three hundred guests. He turned to Lady Barnes, who looked very embarrassed, and said, 'Likee speechee?'
